The Numbers

A survey of investors and analysts by Rotterdam School of Management at Erasmus University found companies routinely give them material information:

47%: those who say they often get material info in one-on-one meetings with companies

48%: those who think companies should be more open in private meetings

22%: those who oppose more company openness in meetings

100 to 150: number of meetings companies hold with institutional investors each year
